Cadsoft Receives 2011 Constructech 50 Status

Guelph, ON, July 1, 2011 – Cadsoft Corporation, the leading developer of Building Information Modeling (BIM) software for the residential and light commercial construction industry, is pleased to announce that they have made the prestigious Constructech 50 listing.

Determined by the editors of Constructech magazine, this listing consists of the most influential construction technology providers with a strong and ongoing market presence.

Peggy Smedley, editorial director of Constructech magazine states "Since the launch of Constructech, we have definitely seen many changes throughout the industry. But, no matter where the industry stands as a whole, we have continuously seen companies step up to the plate in terms of services and solutions for construction professionals."

Cadsoft has experienced continued worldwide growth in the past 12 months in an industry that has otherwise experienced significant downturns. Its Envisioneer software, developed for the professional builder and material supply market coupled with its strong retail positioning with brands such as HGTV, has been an innovative strategy that has kept the organization in the forefront of the residential technology sector during this challenging time.

"We are very pleased to have been recognized by Constructech for our ongoing efforts regarding our industry solutions" says Brad Finck, Vice President of Cadsoft. "By continuing to offer superior solutions and support to our clients, we expect to be able to maintain our growth and increase the level of services and we are able to offer going forward."
